European Individual Ice Speedway Championship: the Final in Poland

The impressive Arena Lodowa in Tomaszów Mazowiecki, Poland, hosted the Final of the European Individual Ice Speedway Championship.

The competition was broadcasted live on NC+ and You Tube with great enthusiasm of the track racing lovers.

At the end of a competitive race, packed with accidents but fortunately with no injured riders, the Russian Nikita Bogdanov won the European Title, while the defending champion Dmitriy Solyannikov lost his chance falling in the Final. Young riders Ove Lindstroem, from Sweden, and the German Luca Bauer completed the podium.

Superenduro European Championship: Italian Goggia does the double

First 2022 race for the European Championship in Lodz, Poland.

There are few words to describe the enthusiasm of all the players in the Superenduro European Championship. The riders, the manufacturers, their teams, the officials. The satisfaction of competing in an entire Indoor Enduro Championship was general. Three dates scheduled for this 2021-2022 season: after Poland, in January the championship will move to Hungary and in March to Germany.

Former Prestige rider Sonny Goggia, from Italy, made the decision to enter the European Championship again this year after narrowly missing out on the crown in the 2019/2020 season. This proved a wise choice as the Italian dominated the class from start to finish, winning both races with his neat and precise style. Joining him on the overall podium were French Aurélien Adesso on his Sherco and Polish Oskar Kaczmarczyk on his GasGas.
